

What is KORI all about?

- KORI helps to document and shares the KO story with First Nations and academic organizations around the world
- KORI finds information for the leadership to help them make informed decisions
- KORI works with community members to build research and project management skills at the local level

Careers at KORI

KORI includes team members in support of First Nation-directed research. The positions require a secondary education and passion for learning and serving the communities.

- Community Research Mentor – support community researchers with training, and resources for local priorities. Visit and engage communities and find new projects and funding for local initiatives.
- Project Manager – Coordinate research projects including budgeting, contract workers, reporting and liaising with funders.
- Research Intern – manage individual projects and coordinate video conference events and training.
- Student Placements – learn technical skills and contribute to community research projects.
- Research Director – Guide research practices, privacy and accountability, liaise with community leadership, funders and academic partners.

Careers at KO

- Keewaytinook Okimakanak has offices in Balmertown, Dryden, Sioux Lookout and Thunder Bay in various departments. Many staff also work in their home communities.
- Health – mental health councillor, nurse, training coordinator, clinical coordinator, translator, client services
- Telemedicine – community engagement coordinator, project manager, privacy officer, clinical and education coordinators, scheduler, community telemedicine coordinator
- Education – councillor, intake worker, teacher, principal, classroom technician
- K-Net – technician, network & web design, database design
- Public Works – engineer, technician, drafter, water treatment tech & trainer
- Finance – accountant, admin, HR, payroll
- Lands & Governance – mapping technician, training coordinator